Joshua: what was that crazy conspiracy that we were reading about at my place a few weeks ago?
Joshua: just reading about http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/John_Titor
Joshua: it's interesting stuff too
Joshua: Titor described the time machine on several occasions. In an early post, he described it as a "stationary mass, temporal displacement unit powered by two top-spin, dual positive singularities", producing a "standard off-set Tipler sinusoid". The earliest post was more explicit, saying it contained: Two magnetic housing units for the dual micro singularities An electron injection manifold <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Manifold> to alter mass and gravity micro singularities <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Gravitational_singularity> A cooling and X-ray <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/X-ray> venting system Gravity sensors, or a variable gravity lock Four main cesium <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cesium> clocks Three main computer units According to the posts, the device was installed in the rear of a 1967 Chevrolet Corvette <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Chevrolet_Corvette> convertible and later moved to a 1987 truck having four-wheel drive.
